Brevity on a Tombstone-Douglas Jer

rold's Suggestion. Among the 1,300 epitaphs collected by Ernest R. Suffing in "Epitaphia" are many quaint and curious speci-mens. Grimaldi off the singe was said to be a sufferer from melancholia. It will be remembered that, going to a physician on one occasion, he described his case, when the worthy doctor briskly told him to "shake off the feeling. Go and see Grimaidi, and if he does not cure you your case is indeed hopeless." "Ains," said the poor suf-ferer, "I am Grimaldi." His epitaph reads "Here Am I."

A prize of £100 is said to have been offered by one Thorpe, who was de-sirous of being perpetuated but briefly on his tombstone. One competitor sent in "Here Lies Thorpe's Corpse." This was certainly brief enough, but finally it was cut to "Thorpe's Corpse." Many of our readers know the Douglas Jerrold and Charles Knight story. They were dining together on one occasion when the conversation turned upon epitaphs. Knight balf to jest suggested that Jerrold should write his (Knight's) epitaph. The sub ject dropped at the time; but, walking urged by prominent men in the district to make the race, and that pressure has been repeated this year. He is regarded came to a spot where each had to take a separate road. Jerrold, extending his hand to his friend, remarked, "I've thought of a capital epitaph for you. "What is it?" said his friend, much in terested, "Oh, very brief and very simple, 'Good Night!"

There are many curious epitaphs on wives. Here's one from Ulverston. Lancashire:

Here ites my wife Here ites she, Hallelujah! Hallelujae!
